I. Introduction of the ISE

The International Society of Electrochemistry \(ISE\) was established in 1949 by prominent European and American electrochemists to support the rapid development of electrochemistry as a modern scientific discipline. At its inception, only a small group of experts were involved through the original CITCE (Comité International de Thermodynamique et Cinétique Electrochimiques).

Over the years, ISE has grown significantly, now boasting more than 3,000 individual members and over 20 Corporate Members, including academic institutions, non-profit research organizations, and learned societies, as well as Corporate Sustaining Members from industrial and commercial sectors. With members from over 70 countries, organized into more than 40 regional sections, ISE represents both industrialized and developing nations across all five continents.

With its headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland, ISE functions as a non-profit organization, deeply committed to fostering the advancement of electrochemistry through international collaboration, knowledge exchange, and research development.

II. Exhibition and sponsorship at ISE Meetings

The society's global meetings provide a key platform for networking, bringing together electrochemists from around the world. By sponsoring ISE conferences and meetings, your organization gains a valuable opportunity to connect directly with a highly specialized audience of electrochemists, scientists, and industry leaders from around the world.

These events attract key decision-makers and innovators in fast-growing, technologically significant fields such as energy, materials, biotechnology, and environmental science. Sponsorship allows you to increase your brand visibility, showcase your latest products, services, and innovations, and establish your company as a leader in the global electrochemistry community.

As an exhibitor or sponsor, you'll not only enhance your organization's presence but also create meaningful connections with researchers and industrial partners seeking cutting-edge solutions. ISE meetings foster an environment where industry and academia converge, offering you the chance to influence the future of electrochemical technologies while aligning your brand with the forefront of scientific progress. Additionally, the international scope of our meetings provides unparalleled access to new markets, making it an ideal platform for expanding your global footprint.

III. ISE Meetings 2025

The ISE organizes Annual and Topical Meetings each year to advance the field of electrochemistry on a global scale. These meetings are central to the ISE's mission of promoting scientific collaboration, fostering innovation, and driving the development of electrochemical technologies. By providing a platform for scientists, researchers, and industry leaders to gather, these events facilitate the exchange of knowledge and the latest research advancements, which are crucial to the rapid evolution of this dynamic discipline.

IV. 39th ISE Topical Meeting Natal 23-26 March 2025

The role of electrochemistry in sustainable energy and the environment

Electrochemistry has great potential to contribute to the generation of clean and renewable energy as well as to the environment in processes such as: the production of green hydrogen, green gasoline, batteries, fuel cells, photovoltaic systems, pollution detection and remediation, reduction of CO₂ to fuels or syngas and ammonia production by nitrogen reduction.
